5. Services offered

Under Portfolio Management advisory services ISFL offers advice to the clients regarding investments in securities based on certain parameters such as clients' risk profile, goals, etc. The discretion lies with the client whether to act upon it or to ignore the advice. The clients may choose to avail trading and/or demat account services offered by ISFL for making investments in securities.

6. Risk Factors

Securities investments are subject to market risk and the value of the investments may go up or down depending on the factors and forces affecting securities markets. The Portfolio Manager does not provide any guarantee or assurance for return on investments covered under Advisory Activities. The standard risks associated with investments in the securities markets is given below:

Systematic Risk:

Systematic risk refers to the risk inherent to the entire market or market segment. Systematic risk, also known as undiversifiable risk, volatility risk, or market risk, affects the overall market, not just a particular stock or industry. Systematic risk is inherent to the market as a whole, reflecting the impact of economic, geopolitical, and financial factors. Systematic risk is largely unpredictable and generally viewed as being difficult to avoid. While systematic risk is both unpredictable and impossible to completely avoid, investors can manage it by ensuring that their portfolios include a variety of asset classes, such as fixed income, cash, and real estate, each of which will react differently to an event that affects the overall market.

Unsystematic Risk:

Contrary to systematic risk, unsystematic risk is the risk associated with the individual company or industry. It is also known as specific risk, non-systematic risk, residual risk, or diversifiable risk. Since unsystematic risks are diversifiable, they can be minimized to an extent with diversifying the portfolio by investing in shares of different companies and also in different sectors.

Inflation Risk:

Also known as Purchasing Power Risk, it is the risk of chance that the cash flow from an investment would lose its value in the future because of a decline in its purchasing power due to inflation. The inflation risk is common in all types of investments. The inflation risk is time-bound. Portfolio adjustments and planning such investments that offer a better inflation-adjusted rate of return are some of the ways to manage inflation risk.

Liquidity Risk:

Liquidity refers to the ease with which a security (equity shares, debentures, etc.) can be traded in the stock market in exchange for currency. Consequently, liquidity risk depicts the risks associated with such trades, as the successful conversion of stock into money depends on various parameters such as book value of a company, bid-ask spreads for shares in the market, etc.

Volatility Risk:

Volatility is defined as the rate at which the price of a security increases or decreases for a given set of returns. It indicates the risk associated with the changing price of the security and is measured by calculating the standard deviation of the annualized returns over a given period of time. In most cases, the higher the volatility, the riskier the security.

Interest Rate Risk:

Interest rate risk arises due to changes in market interest rates. In the stock market, this primarily affects fixed income securities because bond prices are inversely related to the market interest rate.

Currency Risk:

It is the potential risk of loss that may arise due to fluctuating foreign exchange rates. Investors are exposed to this risk on their investments in foreign currency or foreign currency-traded instruments.

The above are risks broadly or largely affecting the investments in securities market. The investors are advised to analyze the risks associated with each of their investment.

7. Client Representation
